An Indianapolis correspondent makes the statement that some of the stockholders are unwilling that the Eastern cluba should depart upon the coming Western series to continue a conflicting schedule in the face of a greatly decreased attendance as compared with that of last season until an effort has been made to correspondingly decrease club expenses or increase the attendance by a rearrangement of the schedule.

The same correspondent also hears that the League is anticipating a change in the Brotherhood schedule, and that if such a move is made the League will begin to change its scheduled series from one city to another in such a way that a rearrangement of the Brotherhood schedule will not afford the later organization say relief from conflicting dates.

RICHMOND, Va., May 29.—The day has come for the dedication of the Lee statue, and the crowds in the quondam capital of than to fall below the estimate made in ad-

The day is clear and pleasant, as every body had hoped it would be, and the city is very bright under the sunshine, decked as it wery bright under the sunshine, decked as it is with all manner of bunting and emblematic displays.

Unformed men are everywhere in the crowds, and few of them are seen singly.

Here are groups of young militamen, knowing nothing of war, but much of bright buttons. There are collected vestesass of the lost cause, some of them wearing the ideutical uniforms in which they did campaign duty years and years ago.

These old fellows get together and talk over old times as only old soldiers can do; but it is remarked that their talk is only reminiscent, it is seldem bitter.

Many organizations of the military order, toth active and veteran, wear the blue instead of the gray, and the United States flag is conspicuously shown over ranks in which colors of the Confederacy are also borne.

The bands last night gave open-air concerts, and serenading parties were also out. The strains of 'Dixis.' My Maryland.' and other Southern airs were heard on all sides, but so, loo, were many airs known as patriotic at the North.

Among the prominent chieftains of the late Confederacy who are here are Long-street, Joe Johnston, Wade Hampton, Gov. Gordon, the flery Rosser, Gen. Heth, Senator Reagan, of Texas, and Butler, of South Carolina, and many more, besides old Jubal Early, and the chosen orator of the day, Col. Archer Anderson.

Carolina, and many more, besides old Jubal Early, and the chosen orator of the day, Col. Archer Anderson.

Gen. Joe Johnston has been assigned the honor of pulling the cord which will draw away the veil and reveal the statue to the people.

The procession is to start at noon, and will include at least 10,000 men, with ex-Gov. Lee as its Chief Marchal.

Seventeen guns will be fired as the statue is unveiled, and it is expected that the scene then will be one of almost unparalleled excitoment.

The route for the parade is lined with grand stands, seats in which in some instances have commanded fabulous prices.

2 r. M.—The procession started between 12.30 and 1 o'clock and is now approaching the site where the monument is placed.

This is at the extreme end of Frankin street, in the grounds soon to be improved for park purposes and to be known as West End Park.

The men in line are constantly cheered along their route and the display they make is truly a fine one.

All the Southern Ptater are represented by military and civic organizations, and by men distinguished in both Eats and military affairs.

In Franklin street, No. 707, stands the plain house of red brick, once the home of Robert E. Lee, the unveiling of whoe statue causes to-day's demonstrations.

About two hundred tons of stove coal was plied up in Hoises's coal bin. The only parsition separating the coal from the yard where the little girl was killed was a filmsy wooden fence about eighteen feet high and an inch thick, which was held in place by posts entirely inadequate to hold the immense strain.

Mamie Freeman lived with her widowed mother and younger sister on the third floor of 603 First avenue. The girl was playing in the yard yesterday afternoon with little Peter Brunckhurst, who is employed by Haiss as a hostler, when the fence suddenly gave wav and the two children were buried under the immense heap.
Henry was rescued ten minutes later in a faint condition. But when the girl was found, three-quarters of an hour after the accident, she was breathing her last.
The body lay in a coffin in the Freeman last night and offered her assistance.

They are kind, "she said, "but why were they not careful? Money will not bring my little girl back to me."

At 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon Thomas Nucoio, a barber who has a shop on the ground floor of 603 First avenue, heard a creaking noise in the rear yard.

Being aware of the dangerous condition of the fence he rushed back and found the children playing in the sand alongside the dangerous barrier. He called to them to get out of danger. The boy started away, but the little girl only looked up and smiled. Before Nucoio could call to her again the hurse pile of coal came down with a crash, burying both children.

Before Coroner Hauley this morning Haiss denied that he had been warned of the dangerous condition of the fence.

He said he had been asked by the owner of a house which adjoined the north side of the coal bin not to pile coal too high against the wall, as he feared the strain would be too great.

The men were told to shovel the coal back from the wall. He considered the fence perfectly safe, but admitted that the accident had proven he was mistaken.

Coroner Hanly concluded to hold the prisoners, and paroled them in the custody of their counsel, Mesars. Furdy and McLaughlin, to swait the result of the inquest, which will be held next Tuesday at 2 eclock.

Up to 11 o'clock this forenoon no trace of them had been discovered.

Both Jackson and Thomas were members

Both Jackson and Thomas were members of the "Black and White" gang which terrorized Monmouth County about seven years ago. They robbed stores and private houses, burned farmers houses, and, in fact, committed every crime but murder.

Jackson and Thomas were the ringleaders. When they were captured the band was broken up and disappeared. They were tried and sentenced to thirty years each in prison, and were received at Trenton Feb. 12, 1884. With "good time" off they would have been released July 28, 1903, but by bad conduct they have liberated themselves sooner.

At first they were put to work in the prison making whips. They obeyed every rule and regulation strictly, and gradually won the confidence of the prison keepers. They were regarded as the model convicts of the prison. From one place of trust they were promoted to another, until recently they were made runners for the keepers.

This is the casiest job a convict can get and Thomas and Jackson seemed very grateful, but last night they executed a plan which was to secure their liberty.

Capt. Charles Parker, a turnkey, fifty-five years old, was on duty at the Hughes street doors. Thomas was dusting in Clerk Muller's little office and Jackson was cleaning up in the hall.

A few minutes after 7 o'clock Keeper Roberts entered the prison. He was on the night watch. Jackson saluted him pleasantly, but remarked. "We thought you would never get here."

Roberts was due at 6 r. m. Capt. Parker let him into the prison proper, and locked the centre doors after him. Hardly had he done so when he heard ashout from Thomas:

"Come here, Capt quick!"
He hurried into the Clerk's office, passing Jackson on the way. Thomas was standing at a narrow iron-grated aperture, gazing into the yard. into the yard.

Here is something funny," he said, looking intently into the prison yard.

The Captain looked through the window.

I don't see anything," he said.

Just then he was hit a fearful blow on the back of the head. He fell on the floor, which was carpeted, and the fall made no noise. While he had been looking into the yard Jackson had stolen up behind him and struck him with a stocking full of wet-sand.
